

Keys for a Happy Marriage

Amazing Facts
Study Guide

As

you've probably heard, nearly half of all marriages now end in divorce, leaving bitter spouses and confused children in their wake. Don't let this happen to you! Whether your marriage is going through tough times or is experiencing marital bliss, or even if you're not yet married but considering it, here's some free but proven advice to help your marriage last. It's straight from God, the one who created and ordained marriage! If you've tried everything else, why not give God a chance? Follow the keys in this guide, and you can secure your home.

SEVENTEEN RULES FOR A HAPPY MARRIAGE FROM GOD'S GREAT BOOK

Establish your own home, even if it must be a one-room apartment.

1. Establish your own private home.

"Therefore a man shall leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife, and they shall become one flesh" (Genesis 2:24).

Comment: God's rule is specific. A married couple must leave father and mother and establish their own home, even if finances require that it be a one-room apartment. Husband and wife should decide together on such policies as these. Then she should inform her relatives and he, his. They must remain firm no matter who opposes. Thousands of divorces would be avoided if this rule were carefully followed.

2. Continue your courtship.

"And above all things have fervent love for one another, for 'love will cover a multitude of sins'" (1 Peter 4:8). "Her husband ... praises her" (Proverbs 31:28). "She who is married cares ... how she may please her husband" (1 Corinthians 7:34). "Be kindly affectionate to one another ... in honor giving preference to one another" (Romans 12:10).

Comment: Continue (or perhaps revive) the courtesies of courtship in your married life. Successful marriages do not just happen; they must be developed. Don't take each other for granted, or the monotony that results will destroy your marriage. Keep love growing by expressing love for one another or it will die, and you will drift apart. Love and happiness are not found by seeking them for yourself, but rather by giving them to others. So spend as much time as possible doing things together if you would get along well. Learn to greet each other with enthusiasm. Relax, visit, shop, sightsee, eat together. Don't overlook the little courtesies, encouragements, and affectionate acts. Surprise each other with little gifts or favors. Try to "out-love" each other. Don't take more out of marriage than you put into it. Divorce itself is not the greatest destroyer of marriage, but rather, lack of love. Given a chance, love always wins.

Never forget that God Himself joined you in marriage.

3. Remember that God joined you together in marriage.

"For this reason a man shall leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife. ... So then, they are no longer two but one flesh. Therefore what God has joined together, let not man separate" (Matthew 19:5, 6).

Comment: Has love almost disappeared from your home? The devil (that notorious home-breaker) is responsible for this. Don't forget that God Himself joined you together in marriage, and He intends for you to stay together and be happy. He will bring happiness and love into your lives if you will obey His divine rules (commandments). "With God all things are possible" (Matthew 19:26). Don't despair. God, who places love in the heart of a missionary for a leprous savage, can easily give you love for each other if you will let Him.

Surprise each other with little gifts.

4. Guard your thoughts—don't let your senses trap you.

“For as he thinks in his heart, so is he” (Proverbs 23:7). “You shall not covet your neighbor’s wife” (Exodus 20:17). “Keep your heart with all diligence, for out of it spring the issues of life” (Proverbs 4:23). “Whatever things are true, ... noble, ... just, ... pure, ... lovely, ... of good report, ... meditate on these things” (Philippians 4:8).

The wrong kind of thinking can destroy your marriage.

Comment: The wrong kind of thinking will destroy your marriage. The devil will trap you with thoughts like these: “Our marriage was a mistake.” “She doesn’t understand me.” “I can’t take much more of this.” “We can always divorce if necessary.” “I’ll go home to mother.” “He smiled at that woman.” Stop thinking thoughts like these or your marriage is gone, because your thoughts and senses govern your actions. Avoid seeing, saying, reading, or hearing anything that (or associating with anyone who) suggests impurity or unfaithfulness. Thoughts uncontrolled are like an automobile in neutral on a hill. Anything can happen, and the result is always disaster.

5. Never retire for the night angry with each other.

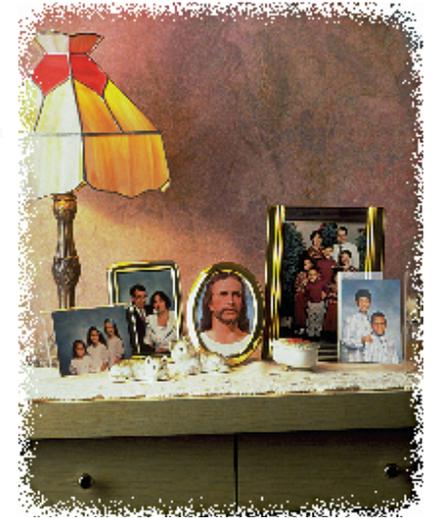

“Do not let the sun go down on your wrath” (Ephesians 4:26). “Confess your trespasses to one another” (James 5:16). “Forgetting those things which are behind” (Philippians 3:13). “Be kind to one another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God in Christ forgave you” (Ephesians 4:32).

Comment: To remain angry and upset over hurts and grievances (big or little) is exceedingly dangerous. Unless quickly solved, even little problems become set in your mind as convictions and attitudes adversely affecting your whole philosophy of life. This is why God says to let anger cool before retiring at night. Be big enough to forgive and to say with sincerity, “I’m sorry.” After all, no one is perfect, and you are both on the same team, so be sportsmanlike enough to honestly admit a mistake when you make it. Besides, making up is a very pleasant experience, with unusual powers to draw marriage partners closer together. God suggests it! It works!

6. Keep Christ in the center of your home.

“Unless the LORD builds the house, they labor in vain who build it” (Psalm 127:1). “In all your ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct your paths” (Proverbs 3:6). “And the peace of God, which surpasses all understanding, will guard your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus” (Philippians 4:7).

Comment: This is the greatest rule. It really covers all the others. Put Christ first! The real secret of true happiness in the home is not diplomacy, strategy, and untiring effort to overcome problems, but rather, union with Christ. Hearts filled with Christ’s love can never be very far apart. With Christ in the home, marriage will be successful. The gospel is the cure for all marriages that are filled with hatred, bitterness, and disappointment. It prevents thousands of divorces by miraculously restoring love and happiness. It will save your marriage, too, if you are willing.

With Christ in your hearts and home, marriage will be successful.

Pray aloud for each other.

7. Pray together.

“Watch and pray, lest you enter into temptation. The spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak” (Matthew 26:41). “Pray for one another” (James 5:16). “If any of you lacks wisdom, let him ask of God, who gives to all liberally” (James 1:5).

Comment: Pray aloud for each other! This is a wonderful rule that succeeds beyond the wildest dream. Kneel before God and ask Him for true love for one another, for forgiveness, for strength, for wisdom—for the solution to problems. God has given a personal guarantee that He will answer. The praying person is not automatically cured of all of his faults, but he will have a heart that wants to do right. No family ever breaks up while sincerely praying together for God’s help.

8. Agree that divorce is not the answer.

“What God has joined together, let not man separate” (Matthew 19:6). “Whoever divorces his wife, except for sexual immorality, and marries another, commits adultery; and whoever marries her who is divorced commits adultery” (Matthew 19:9). “For the woman who has a husband is bound by the law to her husband as long as he lives” (Romans 7:2).

Comment: The Bible is clear. The ties of marriage are meant to be indissoluble and indestructible. Divorce is permissible only in the case of adultery. But even then it is not demanded, only permitted. Forgiveness is always better than divorce, even in the case of a moral fall. Marriage is for life. God so ordained it when he performed the first wedding in Eden. Thoughts of divorce as a solution will destroy any marriage. This is one reason Jesus ruled it out. Divorce is always destructive and almost never a solution to the problem. Instead, it creates much greater problems, so it should never be considered. Torn, frustrated, unhappy, twisted lives almost inevitably follow divorce, and even success in life itself is often thwarted. God instituted marriage to guard people’s purity and happiness, to provide for their social needs, and to elevate their physical, mental, and moral nature. Its vows are among the most solemn and binding obligations that human beings can assume. To lightly set them aside results in removing one’s self from God’s favor and blessing.

Forgiveness is always better than divorce.

9. Keep the family circle closed tightly.

“You shall not commit adultery” (Exodus 20:14). “The heart of her husband safely trusts her. . . . She does him good and not evil all the days of her life” (Proverbs 31:11, 12). “The Lord has been witness between you and the wife of your youth, with whom you have dealt treacherously” (Malachi 2:14). “Keep you from the evil woman. . . . Do not lust after her beauty in your heart, nor let her allure you with her eyelids. . . . Can a man take fire to his bosom, and his clothes not be burned? . . . So is he who goes in to his neighbor’s wife; whoever touches her shall not be innocent” (Proverbs 6:24, 25, 27, 29).

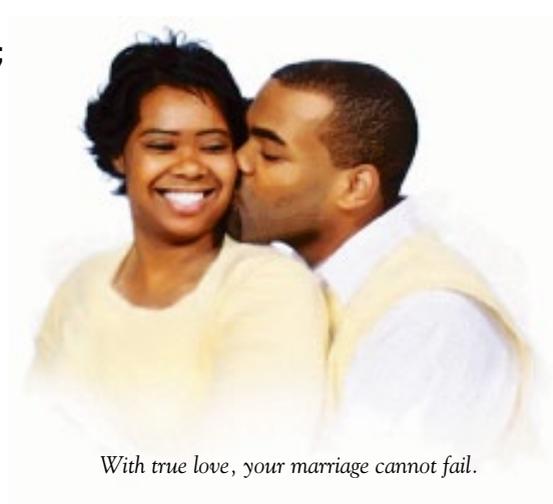

Comment: Family intimacies must never be shared with others—not even with parents. It is a great sin and a tragedy to break this God-given rule. A third person to sympathize or listen to complaints is a tool of the devil to estrange the hearts of husband and wife. Solve your home problems privately. No one else (except your minister or marriage counselor) should ever be involved. Always be truthful with each other, and never keep secrets from each other. Tell no jokes at the expense of your spouse’s feelings. Vigorously defend each other, and strictly exclude all intruders. And as for adultery (in spite of what some marriage counselors say), it always hurts you and everyone else involved. God, who knows our mind, body, and emotional structure (and knows what helps or hurts us) says, “Thou shalt not.” And when He says, “Don’t,” we had better not. Those who ignore His rule will pay the supreme penalty. So if flirtations have begun, break them off at once, or shadows may settle over your life that cannot be lifted.

10. God describes love; make it your daily goal to measure up.

“Love suffers long and is kind; love does not envy; love does not parade itself, is not puffed up; does not behave rudely, does not seek its own, is not provoked, thinks no evil; does not rejoice in iniquity, but rejoices in the truth; bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things” (1 Corinthians 13:4-7).

Comment: Please reread the above Scripture passage carefully. This is God’s true description of love. How do you measure up? Love is not a sentimental impulse, but a holy principle that involves every phase and action of life. With true love, your marriage cannot fail. Without it, it cannot succeed.

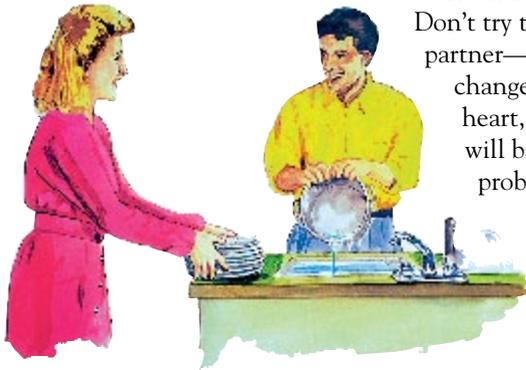

With true love, your marriage cannot fail.

11. Remember that criticism and nagging destroy love.

“Husbands, love your wives and do not be bitter toward them” (Colossians 3:19). “Better to dwell in the wilderness, than with a contentious and angry woman” (Proverbs 21:19). “A continual dripping on a very rainy day and a contentious woman are alike” (Proverbs 27:15). “Why do you look at the speck [splinter] in your brother’s eye, but do not consider the plank [whole board] in your own eye?” (Matthew 7:3). “Love suffers long and is kind; love does not envy; love does not parade itself” (1 Corinthians 13:4).

Comment: Stop criticizing, nagging, and faultfinding. Your husband or wife may lack much, but nagging won’t help. Don’t expect perfection, or bitterness will result.

Overlook faults, and hunt for the good things. Don’t try to reform, control, or compel your partner—you will destroy love. Only God can change people. A sense of humor, a cheerful heart, kindness, patience, and affection will banish two-thirds of your marriage problems. Try to make your spouse happy rather than good, and the good will take care of itself. The secret of a successful marriage lies not in having the right partner, but rather in being the right partner.

Try to make your partner happy, rather than good.

12. Do not overdo in anything; be temperate.

“Everyone who competes for the prize is temperate in all things” (1 Corinthians 9:25). “Love ... does not seek its own [selfish advantage]” (1 Corinthians 13:4, 5). “Whether you eat or drink, or whatever you do, do all to the glory of God” (1 Corinthians 10:31). “I discipline my body and bring it into subjection” (1 Corinthians 9:27). “If anyone will not work, neither shall he eat” (2 Thessalonians 3:10). “Marriage is honorable among all, and the bed undefiled” (Hebrews 13:4). “Therefore do not let sin reign in your mortal body, that you should obey it in its lusts, and do not present your members as instruments of unrighteousness to sin” (Romans 6:12, 13).

Comment: Overdoing will ruin your marriage. So will underdoing. Work, love, rest, exercise, play, worship, meals, and social contacts must be carefully balanced in your marriage, or something will snap. Overwork and the lack of sleep, proper food, or exercise make a person critical, intolerant, and negative. Constant overeating is a great evil that strengthens the lower nature and dulls the conscience. Sexual abuses destroy a love for holy things and weaken vitality. Marriage gives no license to sexual excesses. Degrading, twisted, or intemperate sex acts destroy love and respect for one another. A temperate sex life is recommended by the Bible (1 Corinthians 7:3-7). Social contacts with others are absolutely essential. True happiness cannot be found in isolation. We must learn to laugh and enjoy wholesome, good times. To be overly serious is dangerous. Overdoing or underdoing in anything weakens the mind, body, conscience, and the ability to love and respect one another. Don’t let intemperance wreck your marriage.

13. Respect each other’s personal rights and privacies.

“Love suffers long and is kind. ... love does not envy. ... does not behave rudely, does not seek its own [in selfishness]. ... does not rejoice in iniquity. ... believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things” (1 Corinthians 13:4-7). “Be kindly affectionate to one another with brotherly love, in honor giving preference to one another” (Romans 12:10).

Comment: Each spouse has a God-given right to certain personal privacies without explanation. Do not tamper with each other’s wallets or purses, personal mail, and other private property unless given permission. The right to privacy and quietude when preoccupied should be respected. Your husband or wife even has a right to be wrong part of the time and is entitled to an “off-day” without being given the third degree. Marriage partners do not own each other and should never try to force personality changes. Only God can make such changes, and we shall all answer personally to Him on this matter (Romans 14:12). Perfect confidence and trust in one another—no checking up on each other—is absolutely essential for happiness. Spend less time trying to “figure out” your spouse and more time trying to please her or him. This works wonders.

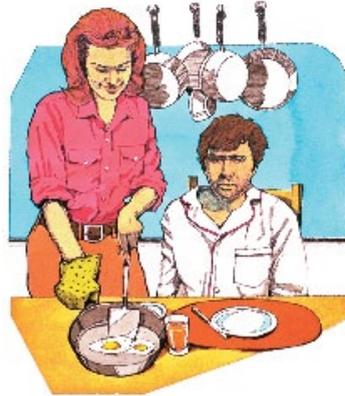

Do not tamper with each other’s wallets or other personal property without permission.

14. Be clean, modest, orderly, and dutiful.

“In like manner also, that the women adorn themselves in modest apparel” (1 Timothy 2:9). “She ... willingly works with her hands. ... She also rises while it is yet night, And provides food for her household. ... She watches over the ways of her household, and does not eat the bread of idleness” (Proverbs 31:13, 15, 27). “Be clean” (Isaiah 52:11). “Let all things be done decently and in order” (1 Corinthians 14:40). “If anyone does not provide for his own, and especially for those of his household, he has denied the faith and is worse than an unbeliever” (1 Timothy 5:8). “Do not become sluggish [slothful]” (Hebrews 6:12).

Comment: Laziness, disorder, dirt, and slovenliness are the devil’s weapons to destroy your respect and affection for one another, and thus ruin your marriage. Neat, modest attire and clean, well-groomed bodies are essential for both husband and wife. The meals should be wholesome, attractive, and served on time. The home should be clean and orderly, because this brings peace, calmness, and satisfaction to all. A lazy, shiftless husband who does not provide for his household is a curse to his family and an insult to God. Carelessness in some of these seemingly small matters is destroying homes by the thousands.

15. Determine to speak softly and kindly.

“A soft answer turns away wrath, but a harsh word stirs up anger” (Proverbs 15:1). “Live joyfully with the wife whom you love” (Ecclesiastes 9:9). “When I became a man, I put away childish things” (1 Corinthians 13:11).

Harsh, angry words crush your spouse’s desire to please you.

Comment: Force yourself to speak softly and kindly to your spouse. Silence, when one is attacked, is often the best method to cool wrath. Decisions made when angry, tired, or discouraged are unreliable anyway, so it’s best to relax and let anger cool. And when you do speak, let it always be quietly and lovingly. Harsh, angry words crush your spouse’s desire to please you.

16. Be reasonable in money matters.

“Love does not envy [is not possessive]. ... does not behave rudely, does not seek its own [selfish advantage]” (1 Corinthians 13:4, 5). “God loves a cheerful giver” (2 Corinthians 9:7).

Comment: All possessions and income in marriage should be “ours,” not “yours” and “mine.” Wives who don’t work outside the home should receive a regular amount for groceries, clothing, and other budgeted items. It should be cheerfully provided instead of grudgingly released under protest. Wife and husband both should have small, equal sums (whenever possible) to spend as desired without giving account. A miserly husband usually angers his wife into being a spender, just as a wasteful husband makes a wife stingy. Showing confidence in your companion’s managing ability will usually make him or her more businesslike.

Discuss and agree in money matters.

17. Talk things over and counsel together freely.

“Love suffers long and is kind; love does not envy; love does not parade itself, is not puffed up” (1 Corinthians 13:4, 5). “He who disdains instruction despises his own soul” (Proverbs 15:32). “Do you see a man wise in his own eyes? There is more hope for a fool than for him” (Proverbs 26:12).

Comment: Few things will strengthen your marriage more than counseling together on all major decisions. Changing a job or purchasing a home, an automobile, a boat, furniture, clothing (major items at least), and all other items that require money involve both husband and wife, and the opinions of both should be considered. Talking things over together will avoid many blunders that could ruin your marriage. If, after much discussion and earnest prayer, opinions still differ, the wife should submit to her husband’s decision. Scripture is clear on this. (See Ephesians 5:22-24.)

Talking things over together will avoid many blunders that could destroy your marriage.

18. Are you praying that your home will be a place where the angels of heaven feel comfortable?

YOUR THOUGHT QUESTIONS ANSWERED

1 Which marriage partner should be the first to confess after a quarrel?

ANSWER: The one who was in the right!

2 Could you suggest a rule for a meddling mother-in-law?

ANSWER: Yes! Be quiet and mind your own business! (See 1 Thessalonians 4:11.) In fact, this rule applies to all in-laws. Many a marriage that might have been a little heaven on earth has been changed into hell by in-laws. The duty of all in-laws is to leave the newly established home strictly alone.

3 My husband is a godless man, and I am trying to be a Christian. His influence is terrible. Should I divorce him?

ANSWER: No! Read 1 Corinthians 7:12-14 and 1 Peter 3:1, 2. God gives a specific answer.

4 When my husband displeases me, I won't sleep with him. He says I am wrong. Am I?

ANSWER: Yes! God gives a definite answer to this question in 1 Corinthians 7:4, 5.

5 My wife ran off with another man. Now repentant, she wants to return home. My pastor says I should take her back, but God forbids this, doesn't He?

ANSWER: No. No, indeed! God permits divorce for adultery, but does not command it. Forgiveness is always better and is always in order. (See Matthew 6:14, 15.) Divorce will seriously mar your life and the lives of your children. Give her another chance! The golden rule (Matthew 7:12) applies here. If you and your wife will turn your lives over to Christ, He will make your marriage supremely happy. It is not too late.

6 What can I do? Men are always attempting familiarities with me.

ANSWER: Be very careful of your conduct. God says, "Abstain from all appearance of evil." (1 Thessalonians 5:22). Perhaps your conduct around men—a suggestive smile, immodest clothing, off-color jokes, or a "too relaxed" and comfortable attitude—encourages their advances. There is something about Christian reserve and dignity that keeps a man in his place. Christ said, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father in heaven" (Matthew 5:16). When Christ really shines from your life, you will have little trouble with evil men and their advances.

7 Can you tell me simply and plainly what God's counsel is to one who has fallen but is truly repentant?

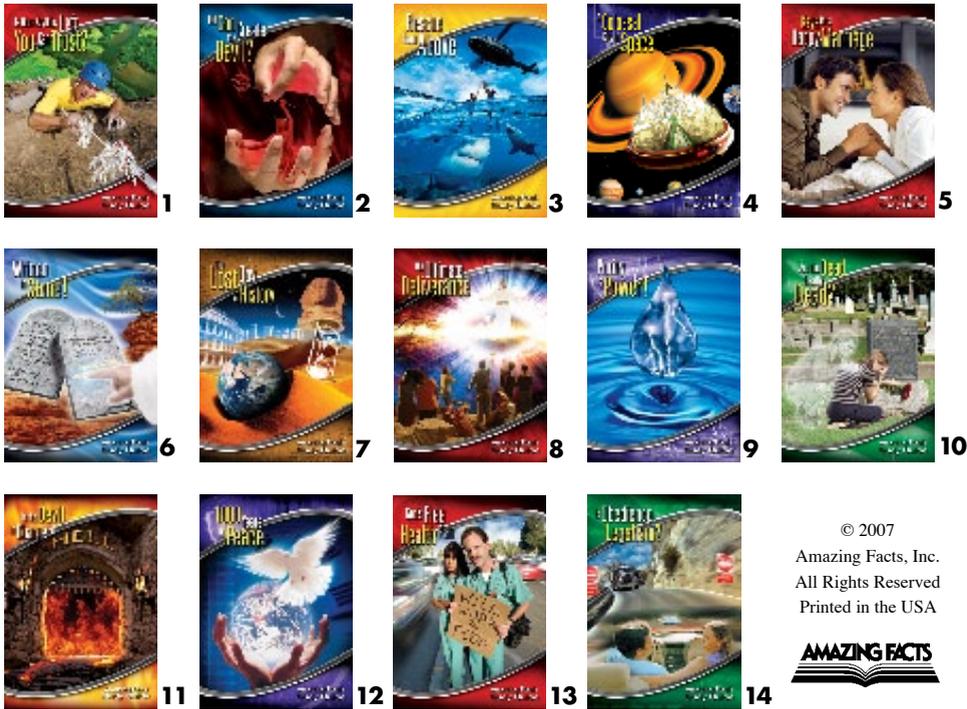

ANSWER: Long ago Christ gave a pointed and comforting answer to one who had fallen into immorality but was repentant. He said, "Go and sin no more" (John 8:11). His counsel still applies today.

8 Isn't the "innocent party" in a divorce sometimes partially guilty also?

ANSWER: Certainly. Sometimes the "innocent party," by lovelessness, inattentiveness, self-righteousness, unkindness, selfishness, nagging, and downright coldness, can encourage evil thoughts and actions in his or her spouse. Sometimes the "innocent party" may be equally as guilty before God as the "guilty" one. God looks upon our motives and judges accordingly. "For the LORD does not see as man sees; for man looks at the outward appearance, but the LORD looks at the heart" (1 Samuel 16:7).

9 Does God expect me to live with a physically abusive spouse?

ANSWER: Physical abuse can be life threatening and is a serious problem that demands immediate attention. The spouse and family members who have been physically abused must find a safe environment in which to live. Both husband and wife need to seek professional help through a qualified Christian marriage counselor.
